EXCELLENCE IN GLOBAL ENERGY – ENERGY ANALYSIS GROUP (EAG)

Excellence in European and International Energy

The University of Kent's national and international research excellence in European and International energy issues has led to the formation of the Energy Analysis Group (EAG).

EAG covers a broad range of inter-disciplinary and inter-sectoral expertise by gathering together both in-house and external specialists from the government and private sector. Robust and diverse, the EAG provides a unique forum in which to examine relevant domestic, regional and international energy issues.

In a series of lectures, workshops and conferences EAG will use its working group framework to examine a multitude of energy policies and practices, with the goal of providing expert analysis and viable solutions to a wide range of dilemmas presently facing the energy sector.

EAG Working Group Topics:

I Energy and Geopolitics

- Security of supply
- Energy and foreign policy
- Energy regions
- Pipelines and energy networks
- Private sector

II Energy Regulation

- Technical standards
- Domestic, regional and international energy institutions
- Energy transport
- Regional electricity networks
