SCHOLARSHIPS AND PRIZES 2014
Armorial bearings

The white horse on the shield is the emblem of the County of Kent, and the three black birds (Cornish choughs), taken from the arms of the City of Canterbury, derive from the arms of St Thomas Becket who was murdered in Canterbury Cathedral in 1170. On the crest are depicted Canterbury’s magnificent Westgate Towers, in front of which are two bishop’s croziers. The ‘supporters’ of the shield are the heraldic lions of the Cinque Ports, the five English Channel Ports lying opposite to France, four of which (Dover, Hythe, Romney and Sandwich) are in Kent.

The University’s motto, taken from the Book of Common Prayer, was translated by the 16th Century Archbishop Thomas Cranmer as ‘whose service is perfect freedom’.
