

Study Plus: Low and High Employability Value Explained

For allocation of Employability Points for Study Plus modules, each course has been categorised as either 'low employability value' or 'high employability value'.

To explain, for courses which directly relate to skills and experiences, which will enhance your employability prospects, these have been categorised as 'high value' courses. To this end, you will earn 5 points per hour capped at 60 points.

For courses which are co-curricular, which has some employability relevance, you will earn 5 points for every two hours and the maximum number of points you can earn are 30 points.

The EP team determines whether a module is 'high employability' or 'low employability' through the following criteria:

	High Value	Low Value
Knowledge	The module will provide knowledge which can be directly applied to the working environment and enhance chances of securing employment.	The module will provide knowledge, although this may not be directly beneficial to the working environment.
Skills	Skills developed would be directly beneficial to the working environment and enhance the chances of securing employment.	Skills developed may not be directly beneficial to the working environment, although the completion of the course will demonstrate determination and loosely transferrable skills.
Experience	Experience gained will be directly beneficial to the working environment and enhance the chances of securing employment.	Experience will demonstrate commitment and willingness to learn, although will not directly relate to a working environment.
