ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE AND INSPIRATIONAL TEACHING

Kent is one of the UK’s leading universities, ranked 20th in The Guardian University Guide 2015. In the Research Excellence Framework (REF) 2014, Kent is ranked 17th* for research intensity, outperforming 11 of the 24 Russell Group universities.

Kent’s School of Politics and International Relations is a dynamic school, which prides itself on its global outlook and offers exciting and diverse programmes of study.

World-leading research
The School has an excellent reputation for its research, with academic staff in the School engaged in cutting-edge research on a wide range of political issues such as ethno-political conflict, human rights, social theories of justice, voting behaviour and electoral reform.

Inspirational teaching
All our teaching is underpinned by the research interests of our academic staff. This means that you are taught by academics who are leaders in their respective fields, who push the boundaries of knowledge forward, critically engaging with key contemporary questions and inspiring creative critical thinking. Our innovative teaching practices have received national recognition. We use a diverse range of teaching methods from large lectures to small group discussions, simulation exercises and class debates. The Open Forum is a weekly debate where a small panel, which includes members of staff and students, respond to the question of the week. The session is then opened to the audience, which leads to a (usually lively!) debate.

A global outlook
Kent is known as the UK’s European university and around 41% of the University’s academics and 27% of our students come from outside the UK, which greatly enhances the learning environment for all our students. The international group of students and staff at the School of Politics and International Relations allows you to develop your understanding of other cultures and to discover first-hand how different societies approach similar issues, placing your academic studies in a global context.

Student support
We pride ourselves on offering excellent academic and pastoral support; our Student Support Officer won the 2014 Kent Union Award in the ‘professional services’ category, having been nominated for the award by students in the School. Our academic staff are always happy to speak to students and are easily contactable during term time via email and during office hours.

A successful future
Our programmes teach key transferable skills and attributes to equip you with the tools you need to succeed in a competitive workplace. In addition, we run a successful Employability Programme to support you in finding internships, jobs and further study.

The University’s Careers and Employability Service also provides advice and guidance. See p7 or go to www.kent.ac.uk/employability *of 122 universities, not including specialist institutions

WHY STUDY FOR A JOINT HONOURS DEGREE?

On our specialist Politics joint honours programmes you study two different but related subjects.

Flexibility and choice
Combining Politics with another subject opens up many opportunities, it helps you to develop a thorough knowledge of two complex subjects and also to understand how they are relevant to each other. It gives you the opportunity to continue studying a subject you may have enjoyed at A level, or move into a new area that you have always wanted to explore.

Most of our joint honours programmes allow you to choose some of your modules so that you can focus on areas that really interest you, while still gaining a firm foundation in each subject area through your compulsory modules.

The number of compulsory modules you are required to take varies depending on the subject combination.

Enriched support and experience
Studying joint honours, you benefit from receiving excellent pastoral care from two schools, ensuring that you are supported at each step throughout your degree. All joint honours students are allocated an Academic Adviser from each school to support their academic needs and development. In addition, you are able to take advantage of initiatives offered in both schools such as employability programmes and specialist talks and lectures. Both schools will support you on your path to employment and help you to develop the skills that are necessary to be successful in the workplace.

Future career prospects
The combination of two subjects broadens your skill set and enhances your employability, helping to give you a significant advantage in a competitive job market. Dividing your time between two subjects at degree level clearly demonstrates to an employer that you have excellent organisational and time management skills, as well as broad academic interests. A joint honours degree opens up a wide range of career opportunities and places those considering further study in a good position to apply to cross-faculty postgraduate programmes after their undergraduate degree.

“The great thing about studying politics and law as a joint honours degree is that I can study two interesting subjects which complement each other extremely well, making my studies more fascinating than if I had studied one of the subjects individually. The joint honours programme has allowed me to choose my favourite modules from both subjects.”

Jack Campbell
Politics and Law
Our campus at Canterbury provides a stunning location for your studies and offers first-class academic and leisure facilities.

Excellent study resources
You are encouraged to make the most of the excellent learning resources provided by the Templeman Library. The Library has extensive print and electronic collections specifically aimed at supporting the courses and subject areas taught at Kent, including over 35,000 books and 180 current journal subscriptions for politics and international relations. Online resources in the subject include e-books, newspapers and access to over 600 online politics journals. All online resources are available both on and off campus. For more information, visit www.kent.ac.uk/library

Kent’s Student Learning Advisory Service (SLAS) also provides information and advice on all aspects of effective learning and study skills, and is available to all students at the University. Please see www.kent.ac.uk/learning for more information.

Student societies
Students in the School of Politics and International Relations make a significant contribution to the School’s research culture. Founded in 2001, the Current Affairs Society – our student society – is now one of the largest at Kent. The Society organises open lectures with invited speakers from politics, academia, business and journalism. The Society’s Think Tank is a discussion group that meets weekly to discuss contemporary world affairs. They also organise social events. More recently, our students have set up the Visions of Europe at Kent Society, which helps students to increase their knowledge of the European Union, its history and its future. There is also a Debating Society and Model Kent United Nations in which many of our students participate.

Public Speaker Programme
The School is committed to making studying politics and international relations as stimulating as possible. We are keen to bridge the gap between academic study and ‘real-life’ politics as experienced by practitioners in a wide range of demanding roles in different political systems. Central to these efforts is our regular Public Speaker Programme for which prominent academics and practitioners from all over the world are invited to Kent to give public lectures on key topics.

Sociable campus
The campus is built on 300 acres of parkland, overlooking the city of Canterbury. Modern buildings are surrounded by open green spaces, courtyards, gardens and woodland. It’s self-contained and all the main facilities are within walking distance. There are excellent academic facilities, as well as extensive additional facilities, including a theatre and cinema, concert hall, sports centre, nightclub, restaurants, bars, medical centre and pharmacy, off-licence and shop.

Historic city
Canterbury city centre is just a 25-minute walk or a short bus-ride from the University campus. It’s a small but beautiful city with stunning medieval buildings, lively bars, pubs, restaurants and cafés, and a wide range of shops, from small independent outlets to high street chains. At the heart of the city, Canterbury Cathedral is also the venue for the University’s degree ceremonies.

Canterbury is an ideal base from which to explore further afield. The attractive coastal town of Whitstable is close by and there are sandy beaches further down the coast. We have strong links with universities in Europe, and Kent is only around two hours by train from Paris and Brussels, with London less than an hour away by high-speed train.
STUDENT PROFILES

Evangeline Shirtcliff is studying for a BA in Politics and Law.

Why did you choose Kent?
I chose to study at Kent because surprisingly there are very few universities in the UK that offer flexible joint honours programmes, however Kent does, which immediately caught my attention. I looked at the subjects I wanted to study, Law and Politics, and checked the league tables and found that Kent was the highest placed for those subjects, compared to other universities including those in the Russell Group.

What attracted you to this degree?
At A level, I loved studying British history and that was heavily based on British politics, so I knew this was something I was very interested in. I excelled in Law and found a lot of connections between Law and Politics. I love this combination and have found they benefit each other in more ways than I originally thought. I learn about current affairs in Politics, which are directly applicable to Law in the sense of calling for reforms in the law. However, the best thing about this combination is LLB Law students can be too obsessed with learning the law rather than developing a deeper understanding of it, and applying it to a wider social context. Politics definitely helps you to do this.

What do you plan to do after graduation?
After I graduate, I plan to do a Legal Practice Course in London and go on to a training contract for a law firm. I am also still very interested in working as part of the Civil Service, which is something I intend to explore more.

Francina Escudero is studying for a BA in History and Politics.

Why did you choose Kent?
I decided to study at Kent because when I visited I fell in love with everything about it. The campus was great and I loved the atmosphere. I knew that both History and Politics were good schools and this was evident when I visited. My first year has gone very well and I have really enjoyed every moment.

How are your studies going?
The staff in both of my schools have been so helpful and feedback on my work has been detailed and useful. I’ve enjoyed all my modules and gained a lot from everything I have learnt. I chose to do a joint honours programme as I have always had a love of both history and politics and I believe they are relevant to each other. I think I have benefited from studying these two subjects together.

What do you plan to do after graduation?
After I graduate, I plan to continue studying at Kent by pursuing a Master’s degree as I love the environment and studying here. I would say to anyone considering studying a joint honours degree to pursue it; it was the best choice for me and has made my degree interesting and diverse.
A SUCCESSFUL FUTURE

Kent equips you with essential skills to give you a competitive advantage when it comes to getting a job.

Good career prospects
Kent graduates continue to do well in the job market; six months after graduation in 2013, less than 6% of Kent graduates were without a job or a further study opportunity.

Many career paths can benefit from the analytical and writing skills you develop during your studies. Our students have gone on to work in a wide range of challenging and rewarding positions including diplomacy, the civil service, European and international organisations, non-governmental organisations (NGOs), the media and in the commercial sector.

The School has a specialist employability officer who organises an extensive range of employability events to help you on your way to securing your ideal job.

Gain transferable skills
As part of your learning experience at Kent, we help you to acquire key skills that are highly valued by employers. You develop abilities in many areas – getting to grips with challenging ideas, writing well, and gaining confidence and experience in expressing your ideas to others. All of these are important skills and ensure that our graduates are strong candidates whatever career they wish to go into.

Q-Step Centre
As a student on a joint honours Politics programme, you have the opportunity to benefit from Kent’s Q-Step Centre, which provides advanced training in quantitative methods in the social sciences. You can choose to follow one of two pathways, which will develop your quantitative skills in a practical and engaging manner, to greatly enhance your employability. See www.kent.ac.uk/qstep

Business and Entrepreneurship pathway
To enhance your career prospects in business or commerce, you can choose to take a package of modules (two per academic year) to help you to develop business and entrepreneurial skills. Topics include e-commerce, accounting, financial analysis, marketing, and business strategy.

Careers advice
The University of Kent’s Careers and Employability Service can give you advice on how to choose your future career, how to apply for jobs, how to write a good CV and how to perform well in interviews and aptitude tests. It also provides up-to-date information on graduate opportunities before and after you graduate. For more details, see www.kent.ac.uk/employability

DID YOU KNOW?
The School of Politics and International Relations is ranked 11th in the UK for graduate employment prospects in The Guardian University Guide 2015.
CHOOSING YOUR PROGRAMME

On the following pages there are brief outlines of the Politics joint honours programmes.

It is possible to study Politics with:
- Economics (see p9)
- English Language and Linguistics (see p10)
- History (see p9)
- Law (see p10)
- Philosophy (see p10)
- Social Anthropology (see p11)
- Social Policy (see p11)
- Sociology (see p12).

Structure
Joint honours programmes at the University are usually split 50:50 so that you spend an equal amount of time studying in each area. You usually have to take compulsory modules in both subjects. In addition to compulsory modules, there may also be recommended modules for each subject area. For certain programmes, there is a specific group of modules that you must choose from.

On most joint honours programmes you also have the opportunity to take optional modules in areas that particularly interest you.

For further details of all programmes, including module descriptions, please see www.kent.ac.uk/ug

The programmes
Your politics modules
The School of Politics and International Relations offers a broad range of modules covering national and international politics.

We have experts in regions as diverse as the Middle East, Eastern and Western Europe, India, and Central America. Their research is foregrounded in specialist modules such as Violence and Conflict in the Contemporary World and innovative regional modules on European societies and Southeast Asian societies.

All students studying Politics as part of a joint honours programme take the following compulsory modules:

Stage 1
- Introduction to Political Science
- Introduction to Comparative Politics

Stage 2
- Political Research and Analysis
- Comparative Politics: Dictatorship and Democracy.

You can also select optional modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently areas covered include: the politics of global climate change; the politics of the Middle East; and feminist contributions to political theory.
In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory Economics modules:

Stage 1
- Principles of Economics
- Mathematics for Economics and Business
- Statistics for Economics and Business

In addition to the compulsory Economics modules at Stage 3, you also select modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently, areas covered include: economic integration in the EU and international trade and finance.

---

History and Politics (LV21)

In many ways, a study of politics is incomplete without a study of history – each, inevitably, informs the other. On this cross-disciplinary programme you gain wide-ranging knowledge, valuable transferable skills and an insight into the complexities of human behaviour and society from these complementary subjects. This joint honours degree follows a modular structure that allows you to tailor your studies to your own interests.

In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory History module:

Stage 1
- Making History: Theory and Practice.

There are no compulsory History modules at Stages 2 or 3, which means you can select modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently, areas covered include: early modern history; Medieval Europe; and politics, society and culture in Victorian Britain.

---

Economics and Politics (LL12)

You gain a thorough grounding in core political and economic concepts. As a student of Economics you examine some of the profound issues of our times, including: economic growth and sustainable development, emerging market economies, financial and monetary crises, environmental and natural resource problems, international trade and aid to poor countries. Politics is, of course influenced by economics, and studying the two subjects together deepens your understanding of both. You consider some of the most pressing questions that confront us today, from the role of markets in civic life to the existence of rationality in decision making.

---

DID YOU KNOW?

In the National Student Survey 2014, Politics at Kent was ranked 11th in the UK for overall student satisfaction.
CHOOSING YOUR PROGRAMME (CONT)

Philosophy and Politics (LV25)
Studying Philosophy and Politics, you engage with the world’s major philosophies and thinkers to discover the processes that shape our lives from within, while also developing your understanding of the global political environment that shapes our lives from without. This joint honours combination is ideal if you want to appreciate the breadth and complexity of our ideas and engage with the fast-changing key issues of today’s world.

In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory Philosophy modules:

Stage 1
- Introduction to Philosophy: Knowledge and Metaphysics
- Introduction to Philosophy: Ethics
- Introduction to Philosophy: Logic and Reasoning
- Philosophical Reading and Writing.

There are no compulsory Philosophy modules at Stages 2 or 3, which means you can select modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently, areas covered include: political philosophy; the philosophy of language; logic; and justice, violence and the state.

Politics and English Language and Linguistics (LQ23)
Taking Politics and English Language and Linguistics develops your understanding of communication from a global perspective, and gives you an insight into the mechanics of language. Language is fundamental to everything we do: it helps us communicate ideas, express our feelings, persuade, and present ourselves to different audiences.

English Language and Linguistics is therefore an ideal complement to subjects where an understanding of how language works is important.

In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory English Language and Linguistics modules:

Stage 1
- Foundations of Language 1: Sounds and Words
- Foundations of Language 2: Structure and Meaning.

There are no compulsory English Language and Linguistics modules at Stages 2 or 3, which means you can select modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently, areas covered include: the history of British English; language in the media; and language variation and change.

Politics and Law (LM21)
This joint honours degree offers you the opportunity to study the closely related disciplines of politics and law, with a pathway enabling you to obtain a Qualifying Law Degree. You gain a solid grounding in politics, both national and international, and are able to choose modules that reflect your interests from the extensive range on offer. You also develop an understanding of the law, taught from a critical perspective, which allows you to... engage in informed debate about contemporary legal issues alongside an understanding of its history and development.

In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory Law modules:

Stage 1
- A Critical Introduction to Law
- The English Legal System and Skills
- Foundations of Property
- Introduction to Obligations
- Public Law 1

Stage 2
- Equity and Trust
- European Union Law
- Land Law
- The Law of Obligations
- Public Law 2

Stage 3
- Advanced Criminal Law.

You can also select one or two optional modules from those available in Kent Law School. Currently, areas covered include: international law, and law and international development.

Social Anthropology and Politics (LL62)

Anthropologists have always studied the political systems of world societies, and today, political anthropology is central to contemporary anthropological thought. A unique strength of the anthropological study of politics is its comparative perspective, which allows you to grasp in concrete ethnographic detail, how power is manifested in diverse cultural practices and institutions. It also reveals how our understanding of political systems needs to be grounded in such ‘local’ knowledge in a globalised and increasingly connected world. For such reasons, training in anthropology – in political systems and more broadly – is an ideal complement to undergraduate training in politics, and an excellent foundation for students wishing to develop a career on the basis of their degree.

In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory Social Anthropology modules:

Stage 1
- Foundations of Biological Anthropology
- Social Anthropology

Stage 2
- Advanced Social Anthropology I and II
- Ethnographies 1 and 2.

There are no compulsory Social Anthropology modules at Stage 3, which means you can select modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently, areas covered include: the anthropology of language, and European, Pacific and Southeast Asian societies.

Social Policy and Politics (LL42)

Studying Social Policy and Politics, you look at the ways in which we as a society promote the welfare of individuals and families, and analyse the impact of political thought and systems on our actions. You study central issues such as poverty, health, crime, education, homelessness and child protection, looking at both the nature of social problems and also at the policies directed towards them by government, and at the role of voluntary and private welfare organisations. You are taught by people who are experts in areas such as political thought, political economy and political theology, and who have advised government departments on important welfare issues. They bring this experience to their teaching, giving you the opportunity to see how theoretical ideas apply in the real world.

In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory Social Policy modules:

Stage 1
- Fundamentals of Sociology
- Social Problems and Social Policy 1: ‘Youth, the Family and the State’
- Social Problems and Social Policy 2: ‘The Market, the Family and the State’
- Sociology of Everyday Life

Stage 2
- Welfare in Modern Britain.

There are no compulsory Social Policy modules at Stage 3, which means that you can select modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently, areas covered include: urban sociology, education, children’s rights and the future of the Welfare State.

Sociology and Politics (LL32)

Sociology provides ways of making sense of a world undergoing unprecedented social change. On this programme, you develop an understanding of the core traditions and contemporary developments in sociological thinking and research as well as an understanding of comparative politics and political research. Among other areas, you study sociological approaches to violence, terrorism and society, and new media technologies, as well as Politics modules that cover areas such as rights, freedoms and individualism, and the politics of deeply divided societies. You are taught by people who are conducting research and providing media commentary in areas such as social theory, human rights, political trust, public attitudes and divided societies. They bring this experience to their teaching, giving you the opportunity to see how theoretical ideas apply in the real world.

In addition to the compulsory Politics modules listed on p8, you also take the following compulsory Sociology modules:

Stage 1
- Fundamentals of Sociology
- Sociology of Everyday Life
- Sociological Theory: The Classics

Stage 2
- Contemporary Sociological Theory.

There are no compulsory Sociology modules at Stage 3, which means you can select modules from areas of particular interest to you. Currently, areas covered include: gender and criminal justice, digital culture, and Chinese society.

DID YOU KNOW?

Kent is a leading university and is ranked among the top 20 in the UK in The Guardian University Guide 2015.
As a joint honours Politics student you are part of both the School of Politics and International Relations and the school where your second subject is based. Below you will find a brief introduction to your other school, please visit their website for more information.

School of Economics

www.kent.ac.uk/economics

The School of Economics has a strong international reputation for research in key areas of economics and has strong links with UK government agencies including the Department for Work and Pensions and the Department for Transport as well as international bodies such as the European Commission and the International Monetary Fund.

The School offers strong, academic-based student support to our students, the success of which is reflected in our high student satisfaction scores; we consistently appear in the top ten economics departments in the National Student Survey. We also run a student peer mentoring scheme, where third-year students provide valuable advice from a student perspective to new students.

School of European Culture and Languages

www.kent.ac.uk/secl/ell
www.kent.ac.uk/secl/philosophy

English Language and Linguistics, and Philosophy are both based in the School of European Culture and Languages (SECL). The School is home to award-winning academics and has long-standing links with some of Europe’s most prestigious institutions.

The School scores highly for student satisfaction with Philosophy at Kent ranked 4th and English Language and Linguistics 9th for overall student satisfaction in the 2014 National Student Survey. We have a dedicated student support team who are able to provide pastoral care and help with your academic needs.

School of History

www.kent.ac.uk/history

History at Kent is well known for its high-quality research, which feeds into our teaching, so that you learn about new developments and ideas in your field. Academics within the School have a diverse range of expertise ranging from the early Middle Ages to the 21st century, with disciplinary interests including politics, warfare and science.

The School has a lively and engaging student body and for the past six years, our courses have consistently achieved over 90% for student satisfaction in the National Student Survey.
Kent Law School
www.kent.ac.uk/law

Kent Law School offers you an exciting, intellectually stimulating and supportive environment in which to study and explore the law. Our distinctive ‘critical approach’ allows you to fully understand the law, and enhances what is already an exciting and interesting subject.

There are a number of student societies related to Law that many of our students enjoy. Law at Kent was ranked 10th in the UK for overall student satisfaction in The Complete University Guide 2015.

School of Anthropology and Conservation
www.kent.ac.uk/sac

At the School of Anthropology our teaching is research led, which means that you are learning at the cutting edge of the subject. Staff teaching on our social anthropology programme have been awarded national teaching awards, reflecting the quality of our undergraduate programmes.

We want our students to feel part of the academic community at Kent and welcome the contributions they make. You study in a friendly and cosmopolitan environment with access to first-class facilities. Our student satisfaction rates are high, as seen in The Guardian University Guide 2015 where we are ranked 6th in the UK for overall student satisfaction.

School of Social Policy, Sociology and Social Research
www.kent.ac.uk/sspssr

Social Policy and Sociology are both based in the School of Social Policy, Sociology and Social Research (SSPSSR). The School has an excellent reputation for teaching and research and was ranked 6th in the UK for Sociology in The Guardian University Guide 2015 and 6th for Social Policy in The Complete University Guide 2015. Social Policy was also ranked 2nd in the UK for student satisfaction in the 2014 National Student Survey.

Our academic staff are involved in current research projects, which means that your studies are based on current issues, ideas and challenges in our society. The atmosphere within the School is diverse and supportive with students encouraged to participate in the range of events we organise.
VISIT THE UNIVERSITY

Come along for an Open Day or an Applicant Day and see what it is like to be a student at Kent.

Open Days
Kent runs Open Days during the summer and autumn. These provide an excellent opportunity for you to discover what it is like to live and study at the University. You can meet academic staff and current students, find out about our courses and attend subject displays, workshops and informal lectures. We also offer tours around the campus to view our sports facilities, the library, and University accommodation. For further information and details of how to book your place, see www.kent.ac.uk/opendays

Applicant Days
If you apply to study at Kent and we offer you a place (or invite you to attend an interview), you will usually be sent an invitation to one of our Applicant Days. You can book to attend through your online Kent Applicant Portal. The Applicant Day includes presentations in your subject area, guided tours of the campus, including University accommodation, and the opportunity to speak with both academic staff and with current students about your chosen subject. For further information, see www.kent.ac.uk/visit

Informal visits
You are also welcome to make an informal visit to our campuses at any time. The University runs tours of the Canterbury and Medway campuses throughout the year for anyone who is unable to attend an Open Day or Applicant Day. It may also be possible to arrange meetings with academic staff, although we cannot guarantee this. For more details and to book your place, see www.kent.ac.uk/informal

Alternatively, we can provide you with a self-guided tour leaflet, which includes the main points of interest. For more details and to download a self-guided tour, go to www.kent.ac.uk/informal
Scholarships and bursaries
For details of scholarships and bursaries at Kent, please see www.kent.ac.uk/ugfunding

School of Politics and International Relations
For more details about our School, please contact Roxanne Devine:
E: polirugadmissions@kent.ac.uk
T: +44 (0)1227 827122

More information
If you have any further queries on how to choose your degree, our admissions procedures, how to prepare for your studies or would like information about the University of Kent’s facilities and services, please contact us.

T: +44 (0)1227 827272
Freephone (UK only): 0800 975 3777
www.kent.ac.uk

Terms and conditions: the University reserves the right to make variations to the content and delivery of courses and other services, or to discontinue courses and other services, if such action is reasonably considered to be necessary. If the University discontinues any course, it will endeavour to provide a suitable alternative. To register for a programme of study, all students must agree to abide by the University Regulations (available online at: www.kent.ac.uk/regulations).

Data protection: for administrative, academic and health and safety reasons, the University needs to process information about its students. Full registration as a student of the University is subject to your consent to process such information.

Location
Canterbury

Award
BA (Hons)

Offer levels
Politics and History
ABB at A level including History, Classics-Ancient History or Classics-Classical Civilisation at grade B; IB Diploma 34 points with 16 points at Higher including History 5 at HL or 6 at SL.

Politics and English Language and Linguistics, Politics and Law, Social Anthropology and Politics, Social Policy and Politics, Sociology and Politics
ABB at A level; IB Diploma 34 points or IB Diploma with 16 points at Higher.

Economics and Politics
AAB-ABB at A level including B in Mathematics unless AS Mathematics at C or GCSE Mathematics at A has already been obtained; IB Diploma 34 points or 16 points at HL including Mathematics 4 at HL or SL.

Philosophy and Politics
ABB at A level; IB Diploma 34 points or IB Diploma with 16 points at Higher.

Q-Step Centre
You have the opportunity to benefit from Kent’s Q-Step Centre, which provides advanced training in quantitative methods in the social sciences. For details, see www.kent.ac.uk/qstep

Business and Entrepreneurship pathway
The Business and Entrepreneurship pathway offers all non-business students the opportunity to take a package of modules (two per year of study) to develop their commercial and entrepreneurial skills and so enhance their employment prospects.

Offer levels and entry requirements are subject to change. For the latest information, see www.kent.ac.uk/ug
COME AND VISIT US

To find out more about visiting the University, see our website:

www.kent.ac.uk/visit