Disability History Month at Kent presents:

Politics & Disability:
What issues are affecting disabled students?

A panel discussion featuring disabled student leaders at the University of Kent, where government policies and political issues facing people with disabilities will be talked about, alongside first-hand accounts about the experience of being a disabled student in the current political climate, and barriers to university participation.

Tuesday 4 December 2018 6-7.30pm
Templeman Lecture Theatre,
Canterbury Campus, University of Kent
