13. A synopsis of the curriculum
In Semester Three, the teaching of critical studies shifts to examine the development of ballet from a historical perspective, to encourage students to fully understand the roots of classical ballet, and the inter-relationship between technical and choreographic development. Students are expected to develop the ability to identify and apply particular generic styles and approaches to their practice and performance. Gaining knowledge and understanding of the comparisons, contrasts, similarities and overlap between Ballet and Contemporary Dance is also a key feature.

It is expected that at this stage basic strategies and skills acquired in year one will underpin students’ approach to lectures, research and written work, and that the emerging development of analytical and evaluative skills will be in evidence in the written essay.
14. Indicative Reading List:

15. Learning and Teaching Methods, including the nature and number of contact hours and the total study hours which will be expected of students, and how these relate to achievement of the intended module learning outcomes

Weekly, 2-hour lectures include the viewing of relevant extract of works. Where possible the experience of the module will include attending live performances. In addition students are expected to study independently for lectures and the final written assignment, through reading the relevant texts and viewing work both live and online.

Tutorials provide support with on-going work to include discussion concerning reflective work and/or essays. Tutorials may be on a one-to-one basis or within small groups.

Additionally a number of students attend ESOL classes (2 hours per week = 36 hours per semester plus homework), and/or 1-1 dyslexia sessions with the specialist tutor (approximately 8 hours per semester.)

The below table indicates hours of study for each teaching & learning method and the specific and generic outcomes addressed by each:
